In brief

The top five trading apps of 2021 are Money Brighter, NetDania, iFOREX, Trade Interceptor, AVA, and Plus500.

Trading applications are getting better and more efficient, allowing you to trade with ease at home or on the go. There are downloadable applications that have sophisticated features as well as mobile apps that allow you to keep attuned to market movements. In addition, there are flexible browser-based apps that provide the best of both worlds.

Mobile trading applications allow investors to trade in any location where they have access to the internet. Some allow you to chart and graph assets, while others are focused on the news. Execution, deposit, and withdrawals are some of the key features that mobile apps provide. Here are the best apps to use in 2021.

Money Brighter

Money Brighter is a financial service that offers the best guidance for all your financial needs, from starting a business to handle all the funds. Their expert suggestion will help you to achieve the business goals like a pro.

NetDania

NetDania is a name that is consistent with sophistication as it provides a plethora of assets and great charting tools. Netdania is one of the top data distributors which allow brokers to white label their products. They offer a web-based platform as well as a downloadable platform in addition to their mobile platform. Their mobile app is very popular and is enjoyed by both forex and CFD traders because of its versatility.

The app provides real-time forex interbank rates and access to quotes on stocks and commodities, such as gold and silver. It provides more than 20,000 financial instruments with real-time market news that is global in nature. In addition, you can draw trend lines on graphs on specific currency pairs and CFD through their customized suite of choices.

The iFOREX trading app is also very popular as it is a customized application that is easy to use. The company created a browser-based application that provides flexibility. The application is brought to you by one of the leaders in the forex industry. Its designers have more than 20-years of forex experience as brokers and platform designers.

iFOREX focuses on CFDs and provides them on a wide variety of instruments including forex, commodities, shares, indices, cryptocurrencies and ETFs. The mobile app has real-time news and analysis as well as an economic calendar. The browser-based application looks like a mobile app, providing a seamless experience when switching from one application to another.

Trade Interceptor

Trade Interceptor is a good choice as it allows investors to execute a suite of securities including currency pairs, commodities, and indices. The application has a graphing package that allows you to perform technical analysis, using 100-different indicators on charts that use real-time data. Trade Interceptor also provides access to live, streaming price quotes. One very nice feature is that they have a mobile app that allows you to test your strategies using historical and real-time data.

AVA

AVA is a popular trading app that you can use to trade forex and CFDs. The AVA application provides a demo account to test drive your strategies before you risk real capital. The best feature is the access to educational resources. You can receive forex or CFD training from AVA's experienced traders.

Plus500

Plus500 focuses on CFDs, including options, stocks, forex, and commodities. The app is also a real and free unlimited demo application, which allows you to see if your strategies can yield returns. The app comes with a negative balance protection insurance which is an internal stop loss and will cut you off if your equity is in danger of becoming negative. They provide real-time charts along with quotes and breaking news.
