In brief

WhatsApp now lets iPhone users play YouTube videos directly within the app, eliminating the need to switch to the YouTube application. The feature is available in version 2.17.40 for iPhone 6 and later models, though video playback stops when you switch chats.

WhatsApp recently came with one of the most helpful feature for all the users. Now iPhone users can play YouTube video within the WhatsApp application without going to YouTube app. The new feature provides in-app YouTube video playback. Currently the new feature is available for iPhone users and also is in testing stage.

The new WhatsApp feature is available with version 2.17.40 of the iPhone app. The feature was already available for some users and we are expected to release the update soon to the public. The in-app YouTube playback feature is not yet available in Android. For all the Android users, you have to wait for some more time to get this feature.

Notably, the video playback does not continue when you change the chat. There is one more limitation to the feature as it is only available for iPhone 6 and later models, due the larger display size in comparison to the predecessors, the report notes. As the feature has only been spotted on the iOS.

Unless WhatsApp finds certain issues with the implementation with this feature, users can expect to see it making its way to the app soon. As playing YouTube videos outside the app has been an annoyance for so long, we will eagerly wait to see the feature roll out widely.
